

Recent Deaths.

Smith.
George M. Smith, who formerly lived at 98 Main street, died August 5, at Lyndon Center. Mr. Smith contracted measles about four months ago, from which he never fully recovered. A bronchial trouble followed, which terminated in tuberculosis. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow, who was Miss Claribel A. Pinney of Brighton, a mother, two brothers, and three sisters, and a sister-in-law, who has made her home with his family. Mr. Smith was born in Brighton, April 7, 1870, and was the second son of Adna and Angeline (Quimby) Smith. He came to St. Johnsbury in 1889 and entered the employ of the Ely Hoar & Pork Co. and later has been employed by the A. H. McLeod Milling Co. Funeral services were held at Lyndon Center, Wednesday, conducted by his pastor, Rev. A. Francis Welch of the Church of the Messiah, assisted by Revs. Lyster and Burgin of Lyndon Center. Mr. Smith was a member of Passumpsic Lodge No. 27, F. & A. M., and of Gen. Logan Council, O. U. M. A. M., who were represented at the services and furnished bearers. In the death of Mr. Smith the world loses a strong, brave, and fearless man. His influence will long remain among those who knew and loved him, as a help toward all good things.

Republican Rally.

Strong Speeches by Messrs. Fitts and Dillingham.

The opening gun in the state campaign was fired at Music Hall, Friday evening, when Attorney General Fitts of Brattleboro and Senator Dillingham spoke at a republican rally, which had been arranged by Harry Blodgett of the state committee and O. H. Henderson, W. A. Taplin and Henry R. Albee of the town committee. The St. Johnsbury Band furnished music and P. F. Hazen presided. Both speakers spoke for an hour apiece and gave addresses that were pitched on a high plane and full of facts and figures.

Mr. Fitts began by urging all the people to attend the Clement rally that was booked here August 14, and then discussed at length the report of the investigating committee on our four state institutions—the state prison, the Waterbury asylum, the house of correction and the industrial school. He said the committee had as an expert at the various hearings a Clement democrat, F. S. Platt, and this expert had testified, and also signed a report, that there was no graft in these institutions and that they were all managed in as good a business manner as any Vermont corporation. Notwithstanding this report, and Mr. Platt's own sworn statements, Mr. Clement was going up and down the state telling the people of Vermont that there was graft in these institutions, and that if he was elected governor he would turn all the officers out.

Mr. Clement has had Mr. Pratt working for him night and day and Sundays to find graft in the state and his special accountant has not reported any yet. "If there is graft in the state why don't Mr. Clement make some specific charges," Mr. Fitts said he would read from the democratic platform what that document had to say about railroad rates. The audience listened breathless for a minute and then Mr. Fitts said that was all the platform had about it. After the applause had subsided from this sharp rally, Mr. Fitts explained to the audience how Mr. Clement had a secret rate on the Rutland railroad of $1.05 cents a ton less on coal from Rutland to New Haven Junction than any other dealer. Mr. Clement and his family own the Bristol railroad which runs from New Haven Junction into Bristol and that railroad sold all the coal in the town of Bristol. Mr. Fitts said this was the way the Standard Oil Company got rich and added, "If I could sell coal in St. Johnsbury with a secret rate of $1.05 less than any competitor I could clear $25,000, could have a coon quarte, could ride in a private car, and then run for governor."

Mr. Fitts said when Mr. Clement was in the legislature he worked over time to defeat the employers' liability bill and the weekly payment bill and this same man now posed as the laboring man's friend. "What has he done to help the republican party? He has been tearing it down for the last six years. He stands on a platform which does not contain a single plank of improvement."

Senator Dillingham discussed the matter of state expenses as suggested by the poster and the advertisement issued by the literary bureau claiming that our expenses had doubled in the last 24 years. He said there had been an increase in expenses of about $300,000 and, giving them in detail, asked the voters if they wanted to cut off the annual appropriation of $30,000 for colleges, $10,000 for the Soldiers Home, $10,000 for the state laboratory, $35,000 for preventing tuberculosis in our cattle; $14,000 for our normal schools; $15,000 for our militia and other expenses which the growth of the state and the intelligence of the people demanded and necessitated. The Senator said the largest increase in our expenses were $112,000 for the care of the insane and $114,000 for our courts. He said in a quarter of a century litigation had increased, which accounted for the increase of court expenses, while the increase in the care of the insane was due to legislation which took the burden away from the towns and gave it to the state. He gave a detailed statement about the building of the asylum at his own home in Waterbury and asked the voters if they wanted to go back to the town system and support these unfortunate by a direct town tax.

Senator Dillingham said all the expenses of the state, which so distressed Mr. Clement, were paid by tax on corporations, yet when Mr. Clement was in the senate he pigeon-holed the bill to increase the tax on railroad corporations. Today the corporations pay $673,000 and there is an additional income of $40,000 from the collateral inheritance tax. Vermont is one of only six states in the Union which gets its income from the corporation tax, and he did not believe the state was tied to a hitching post as Mr. Clement's paper, the Rutland Herald, recently declared.

An Independent Business.

The Citizens' Tel. & Tel. Exchange has placed a pav station at C. C. Bingham's drug store, also a fine enameled sign over the door. This will accommodate the people on the hill very much. This Company seems to be in a prosperous condition, having just paid the last of their indebtedness. They have about 1000 'phones talking, and have 175 miles of pole line with trunk lines connecting them with other companies. A trunk line is about completed to Hardwick, and before winter a trunk line to Barre and Montpelier will be completed. An independent company is now building an exchange in Barre. The time is not far distant when patrons can talk to any part of New England or anywhere else on independent 'phones. Independent companies have asked for franchise to build exchanges in Montpelier, Burlington and Rutland, also in Concord, Manchester and Nashua, N. H., and in Boston, Lawrence, Lowell, and Springfield, Mass., and several other cities. New York state is nearly covered with independent lines. New York City has granted a franchise to the Great Eastern Telephone Co., who have now more than 250,000 contracts for independent 'phones.

There is in the United States today 4,000,000 independent 'phones, and there is being installed every working day in the year 3000 more. This work will go on until all have 'phones.

THE FUSION RALLY.

Addresses by Mr. Bullard and Mr. Clement.

Music Hall was crowded to the doors last night and several hundred people turned away, the occasion being the fusion rally with Vernon A. Bullard of Burlington and Percival W. Clement as the speakers. Instrumental music was furnished by the St. Johnsbury band, while the colored quartette captivated all their hearers by their rich melodies. C. H. Clark introduced Mr. Bullard as the first speaker and he spoke for about 40 minutes on state issues.

After paying a tribute to the independent voter and saying Vermont was as absolutely under ring rule as Pennsylvania or Rhode Island, he announced that he would speak upon four topics: ring rule and bossism; unwarranted expenditure of state money; failure and neglect to enact legislation favorable to the people; neglect to charge obsolete policies. He cited the last republican convention as a notable example of bossism, said Mr. Proctor could only be elected under the influence of ring rule, and declared that every federal office holder down to the lowest salaried postmaster was supporting Senator Proctor's son for governor. He referred to the people's choice in 1902 when Gov. Page was elected, and asked if they thought that McCullough was the people's choice in 1902, accusing him twice in his speech of spending $255,000 in that campaign.

He said Gov. Page urged the legislature to retrench without avail. He said the democratic party stood for the passage of the weekly payment bill and the employer's liability bill, both of which Mr. Proctor opposed when in the legislature. They also favored the abolition of double taxation, the cause of our deserted farms. In closing he said Mr. Clement ought to be elected governor, if for no other reason because he had compelled the auditor to show his books to the voters when requested.

Mr. Clement spoke for about 45 minutes with hardly a glance at his notes. He declared that the independent movement sprang from the people who were tired of ring rule and the republican machine. This movement has invaded both parties alike. The only issue the republican party ever had was local option, and that was originated and adopted by the local option wing of the party.

Mr. Clement admitted the charge that he fought the increase of the corporation tax and said he did it because it had more taxes the legislature would waste more of the people's money. But he denied that he ever opposed the passage of a state tax. He then discussed in detail the state expenses, saying that they had now reached $365,000 and a deficit of $50,000. He accused the machine of keepings power by graft and patronage, and said hand in hand with graft and patronage was the continued increase of state expenses.

He declared that state expenses increased farm property decreased and said the depreciation of farm property in Vermont since 1880 was $20,000,000. He criticised Mr. Proctor for the Vermont Marble Company's dealings with the House of Correction, said there was graft at the Waterbury asylum, specifying the charges of some of the doctors while on a leave of absence, the sale of a carriage and sleigh at auction, and the coal charges of the Central Vermont railroad. He said it was a false charge that he favored boning the state for highways, but he did favor saving $250,000 from state expenses and making trunk line highways from Massachusetts to Canada, and keeping them in repair at the expense of the state instead of at the expense of the small towns.

He denied the charge of a coal rebate on the Rutland railroad and said the Bristol railroad got a low rate because it was supplied coal and all the railroads helped the other roads in giving them low freight rates or supply coal. In closing he urged the voters to do one good turn for old Vermont on September 4 and give both parties and the machines a rest.
